

Creators expose care gaps, families demand change

03 Mar 2025 - 02 Jan 2026

A creator-led flare-up in March 2025 put long-term care on center stage, then the conversation softened into neutral updates by December 2025. The twist - engagement lived on TikTok and YouTube, while the bulk of the volume came from news and the open web.

... "Give my baby a good home, I'm not able to care for him." 6. London man's old-age pension stopped coming, leaving family to cover expenses A London couple were hit with a steep increase to their monthly expenses after the man's elderly father stopped receiving his Old Age Security (OAS) and Guaranteed Income Supplement (GIS). The $1,881 per month helped offset the cost of 80-year-old Hector Moraga's long-term care fees. Francisco and Meaghin Moraga in their London, Ont. kitchen on June 12, 2025. The couple have had to pay out of pocket for Francisco's father's nursing home bills, after the octogenarian's old age security payments stopped in March without explanation. (Matthew Trevithick/CBC) Francisco and Meaghin Moraga had to withdraw savings to pay for Hector to stay in the home, they said. After nearly ...

Sign up for the Mind Your Money weekly newsletter By subscribing, you are agreeing to Yahoo's Terms and Privacy Policy Subscribe Arizona's minimum wage, for example, will bump to $15.15 an hour from $14.70. Nebraska workers will see a raise from $13.50 to $15 an hour; New York City will climb from $16.50 to $17. Missouri will go to $15 from $13.75. In New Jersey, the wage floor for long-term care workers will rise to $18.92 an hour from $18.49. "The upcoming minimum wage increases are incremental and won't magically turn severely underpaid jobs into living-wage jobs, but they do offer a bit of relief at a time when every dollar matters for people," Lathrop said. "The bigger picture is that raising the minimum wage is just one piece of a much larger fight for a good jobs economy rooted in ...
